Oil Options Show Market Sees Further Gains on Middle East Risks

Oil options show investors are betting prices will rise amid escalating hostilities in Middle East. Call options, which profit when prices rise, were at a premium to puts at Wednesday's close for the first time since mid-August. The options skew became more bullish in Asia on Thursday, although trading was relatively thin due to a weeklong holiday in China. Global benchmark Brent was trading around USD75.1 a barrel for a loss of 5% since Tuesday's close, while West Texas Intermediate was near USD71.4.

A flurry of crude options that pay out if prices rally to USD100 a barrel traded Wednesday, a sign some traders are looking to hedge against the risk of supply disruptions in the Middle East.

Chinese Stocks Soar on Stimulus Bet

Chinese shares listed in Hong Kong jumped the most in almost two years as stimulus-induced euphoria swept through the city's USD5.8tr market.

Sentiment toward equities in the world's second-biggest economy has seen a dramatic turnaround since the start of last week as the authorities unveiled a range of stimulus measures that included interest-rate cuts, freeing-up of cash for banks and liquidity support for stocks. Four major cities also eased home-buying curbs and the central bank moved to lower mortgage rates.

The Hang Seng China Enterprises Index climbed as much as 8.5% before closing up 7.1%, a 13th straight day of gains. Property developers led the rally, with a gauge of the sector surging as much as 47%, while an index of brokerage shares jumped 35%, both record intraday moves. Mainland Chinese markets remain shut until Oct. 8 for a week-long holiday.

Euro-Zone Inflation Drops Below 2%, Backing ECB Cut Bets

Euro-area inflation slowed below the European Central Bank's 2% target for the first time since 2021 backing investor bets that interest rates may be lowered more quickly than previously anticipated. Consumer prices rose 1.8% from a year ago in September, down from 2.2% in the previous month as energy costs fell sharply, Eurostat said Tuesday. The euro traded 0.2% lower at about USD1.1109, retreating from a near two-year high.

Money markets now see an almost 90% chance that this month's meeting will bring a third reduction of the year in rates. Another quarter-point move is likely to follow when policymakers convene in December for the final time in 2024. That would bring the deposit rate down to 3% from 3.5% currently.
