Global Trends

China Seeks to Spur Growth by Giving Local Officials Bond Leeway

China is allowing local officials to invest in more areas with a key government bond while also simplifying its approval process in a bid to make better use of an important source of public funding to drive the economy. Local governments can use their special bonds to invest in projects as long as they're not on a special list published by the cabinet, the government said in a document Wednesday. That list includes projects that don't generate any returns, government buildings, vanity constructions like giant sculptures and commercial property.

China's top leaders have placed boosting domestic demand as their top priority for economic work in 2025 because the robust growth of exports is threatened by a potential second trade war with the US.

Euro-Zone Growth Expectations for 2025 Dialed Back by Economists

The euro-area economy will pick up less momentum next year than previously foreseen and only expand slightly more strongly than in 2024, according to a Bloomberg survey. Analysts in the poll now predict growth of 1% in 2025. While that's up from 0.8% this year, it's down from an earlier estimate of 1.2%. They also lowered their expectations for 2026 to 1.2% from 1.4%. The predictions are more pessimistic than those of the European Central Bank, which also lowered its outlook this month as it cut interest rates for the fourth time since June. Officials still expect households to drive a recovery as incomes rise and inflation stabilizes at the 2% goal, though they've repeatedly overestimated how quickly that boost will materialize.

Oil falls as dollar surges on Fed outlook for fewer rate cuts

Oil edged higher in light holiday trading, buoyed by fiscal stimulus measures in China and a US industry report flagging another drop in stockpiles. Brent traded near $74. In a bid to bolster growth, China is giving local officials more leeway to invest proceeds of government bonds, while keeping interest rates unchanged for now.

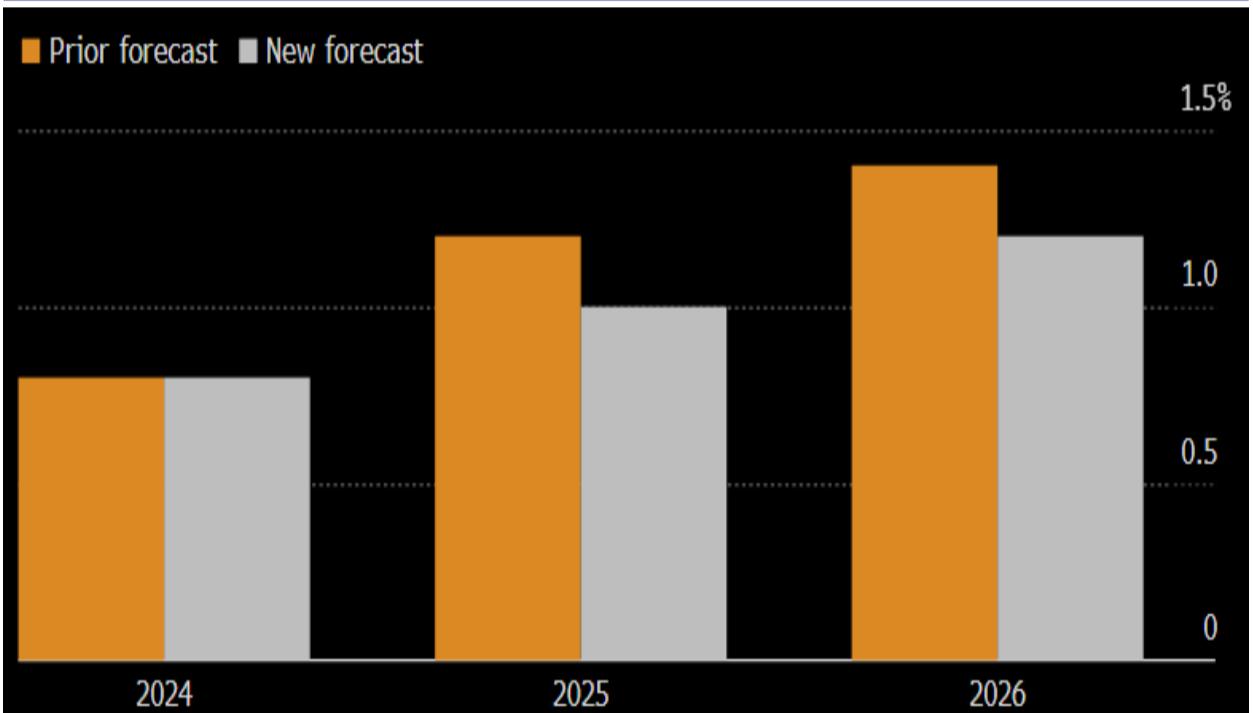

In the US, the American Petroleum Institute said commercial crude inventories fell 3.2 million barrels last week, which would be the fifth consecutive drop if confirmed by official data. Nationwide stockpiles typically ebb in December, before building in the opening months of the new year.
