Global Trends

Oil stuck in narrow range ahead of key US economic figures

Oil steadied ahead of US economic data, as the market seeks a catalyst to break out of the tightest trading range in over three years.

Brent traded near USD85 a barrel and has swung in a narrow range of USD1.76 so far this week, the smallest fluctuation since early 2021. Traders are watching for a range of US economic data over the next two days, including employment figures, which could set the tone for oil and broader markets.

Even an unexpectedly large build of US crude stockpiles failed to ignite stronger price moves on Wednesday, with West Texas Intermediate closing little changed. The benchmark was around USD81 a barrel.

US Gulf Coast crude inventories ballooned by 2mn barrels last week and remain at the highest since 2020 on a seasonal basis.

US home starts plunge to slowest pace since June 2020

New home construction in the US slumped in May to the slowest pace in four years, as higher-for-longer interest rates sap the housing industry's momentum from earlier this year.

Housing starts decreased 5.5% to a 1.28mn annualized rate last month, according to government data released Thursday. Building permits, which point to future construction, fell 3.8% to a 1.39mn annual rate, also the weakest since June 2020. The declines in starts and permits were broad across multifamily and single-family units. Authorized permits for single-family homes dropped for a fourth straight month to the slowest pace in a year.

France's risk premium over Germany closes at highest since 2012

Investors are demanding the biggest premium in over a decade to hold French bonds compared to safer German debt, as concerns mount that parties vying to win France's upcoming legislative elections may further bloat public finances.

The spread between the two nations' 10-year bond yields rose 3bps to 80bps, the widest on a closing basis since 2012, when the euro area was in the depths of its debt crisis. Some investors say the gap could rise to 100bps.

France's leftist alliance unveiled plans earlier in the day to address the country's economic challenges, including EUR150bn of additional annual spending by 2027.
